

Introduzione alla Geografia del turismo

di Lorenzo Bagnoli

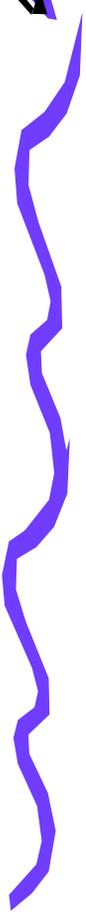

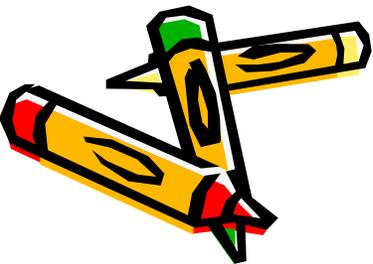

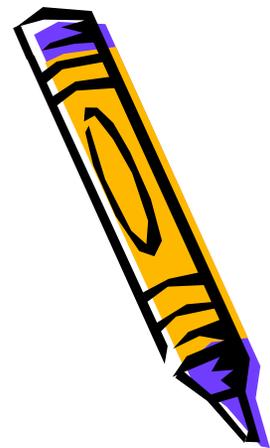

Geografia... cos'è?

- né una scienza naturale...
- né una scienza umana...
- ... ma una disciplina a cavallo fra le scienze naturali e le scienze umane!

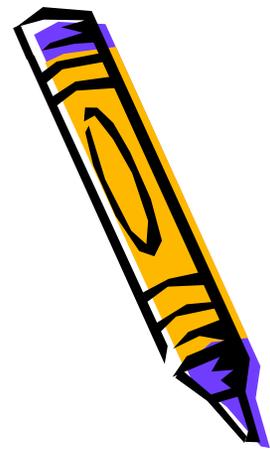

La Geografia infatti...

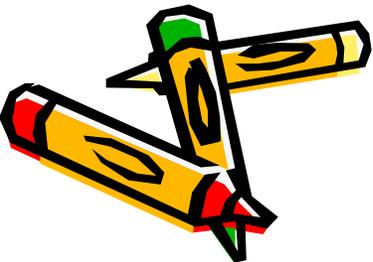

... non studia né l'ambiente né l'uomo ma
LE RELAZIONI FRA UOMO E AMBIENTE

Relazioni uomo-ambiente

- Da una parte l'ambiente INFLUENZA il comportamento dell'uomo
- Dall'altra l'uomo MODIFICA l'ambiente

E il turismo?

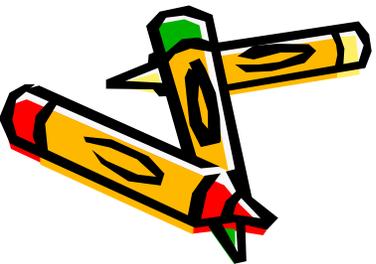

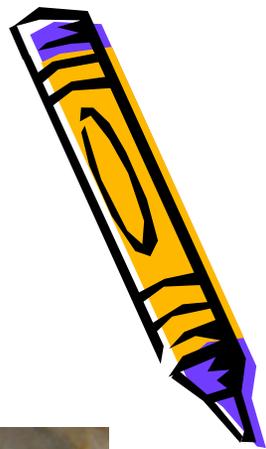

- Domanda numero 1: Secondo voi, l'ambiente INFLUENZA l'attività turistica dell'uomo?

Talvolta, tuttavia, oggi...

- il turismo è "deterritorializzato"!

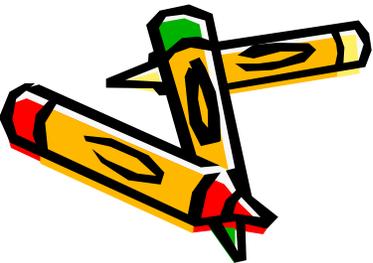

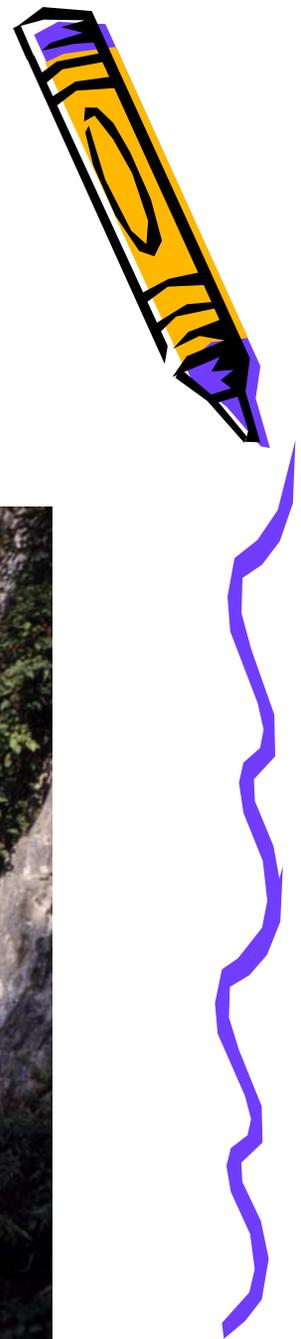

- Domanda numero 2: Secondo voi, l'uomo MODIFICA l'ambiente con l'attività turistica?

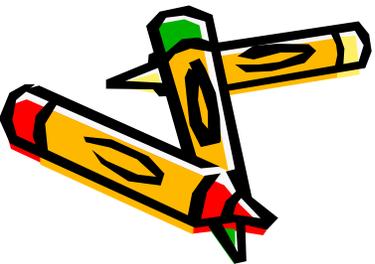

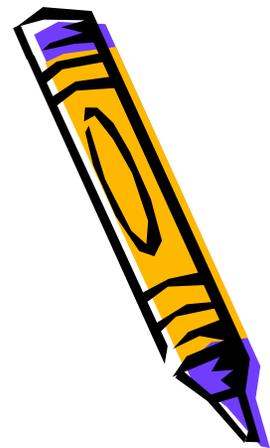

L'uomo modifica le
montagne

L'uomo modifica le coste

L'uomo modifica il territorio per la sua mobilità

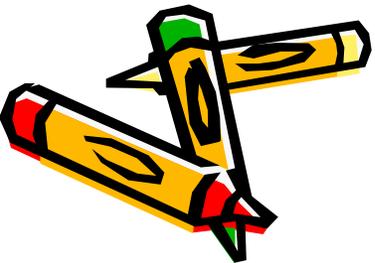

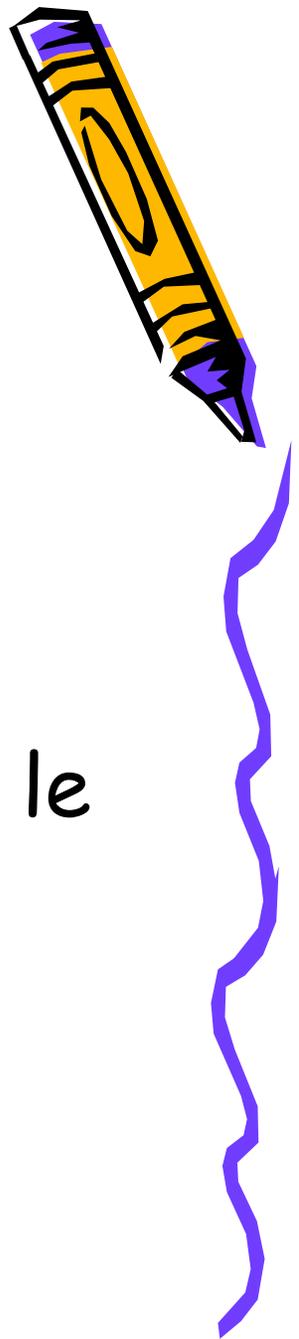

Il turismo è "incontro" (quindi modifica anche le culture!)

Questione di "limite"

Ma fino a quale punto l'uomo può modificare l'ambiente per svolgere le sue attività turistiche?

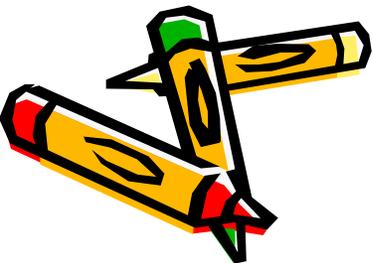

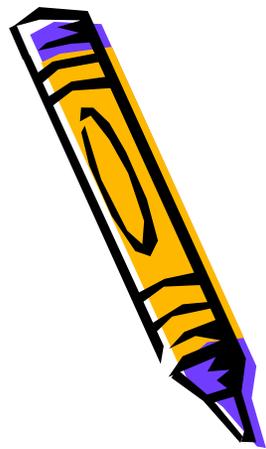

La risposta sta nel turismo "sostenibile"

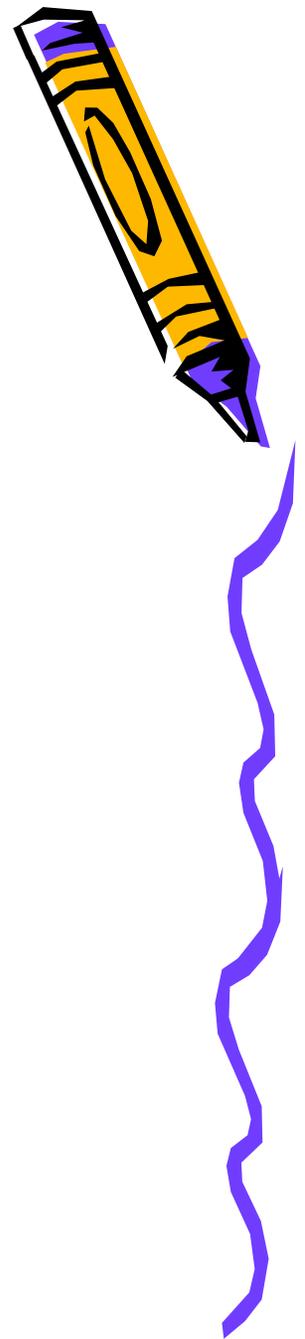

"Lo sviluppo del turismo deve criterio della sostenibilità, ciò essere basato sul significa che deve essere:

- ecologicamente sostenibile nel lungo periodo,
- economicamente conveniente,
- eticamente e socialmente equo nei riguardi delle comunità locali"

("Carta di Lanzarote", 1995, art. 1).

Lo "scienziato del turismo" oggi sa:

1. Conoscere il territorio
2. al fine di valorizzarlo
3. e, nel contempo, salvaguardarlo

cioè: conosce la geografia!
